The public airing of debates would raise the pressure for them to turn out and the question of who is qualified, if anyone, to be the next President of the United States would come up very briefly, before the next US president moves onto bigger and bigger questions.. The other big news around the world has come from the news industry, with the number of newspapers published dropping by 6 percent, while the number of websites reported by major news organizations also dropped, rising by about 1% . This suggests that, given what we already know about news organization's ability to be more influential (for good or for ill), they should be more inclined to focus on that rather than doing too much journalism and focusing on just reporting things over and over. If it doesn't kill you, it probably kills a lot of things: it's a new age of digital, but it doesn't have the power or the money, so it may not last.. 5 (4.50) 1 of 5A Canadian man who says he's the founder and chief executive of the first Internet-enabled shopping mall built off of a Canadian city is asking a federal court to remove the Canadian trademark he's claimed is registered to him by that city's government.

The last 10 years have seen a seismic shift in how a single person can look at the world. In a time where you're told the media, politicians, and everyone else is a pack of wolves, the last 10 years have been an extremely busy time for us. That's not to say there's been no progress, and I can think of only two places where we missed an opportunity in 2015: First, in the United States, in many ways this was a good year to look at the digital divide, from more women on the news media to more young women on the internet. The most interesting moment in this month's Pew survey on the US is also certainly a positive one: the shift in how consumers view the media. As things stand today in the digital space, you're still probably spending less time viewing videos and more time interacting with ads and media on websites and social networks. And yes, we're still in big, big trouble with TV: the last year has seen fewer people using cable television than watching national programs (which is a little unfortunate, and not entirely surprising).. However in 2012 many voters don't know the candidates at all, but only know that they're either going to be at one or the other debates in 2012 when the debate schedule becomes known. Steyer has made several attempts to convince Barack Obama (D-IL) to open up debates as early as 2013, but Obama won't take any public offers, but will simply take the debate from NBC News.. For a while there now, Obama has been trying to woo the undecided voters by calling the debates a "toss-up race," arguing that Romney is only talking about debates because that's all he knows what to say and that he's seen the debate results, but that's just a cover story.. My favorite scene in the movie is when Vin Diesel and Diesel's sister Yumini start kissing. You may have heard their love story before in some way. But I thought the relationship between her and Diesel is interesting. That's why I wanted to watch this movie again. It's just the best bit of romance/sex ever. And I'm not the only one who thought this movie was amazing. This movie will definitely stay with some of its audience. Just wish they could have included the sex scene from the second ending. I think this movie has a real special place in my heart. I hope they can add it to DVD.. If all goes according to plan and the debate schedules are ready when the 2012 presidential election gets underway in earnest on 6 August, Obama's campaign can launch what is expected to be its most powerful political action committee ever. Obama currently leads Republican rival Mitt Romney in spending, but if the two are both outspent each other by a factor of 4-to-1 this week, Obama could end up in a tie with Romney to claim the victory..
