About the charity Ally is a UK based charity providing information and support to parents and teachers of people with learning disabilities. We want to raise £5000 to get people with learning disabilities who are interested in cycling involved in a series of road races. We will host a race on each of the 12 learning disability conferences we hold across the year. Our history As a charity, we were formed in 1988 by parents and teachers of people with learning disabilities. We are now one of the UK's largest charities supporting people with learning disabilities and their families. In 2010, we were given Charity status and the charity now operates across the UK. The key aims of our work Ally is always very grateful for any donation which will allow us to continue to deliver our core work. Here are some of the specific areas we are working on. Provide information and support to people with learning disabilities and their parents/carers Ally, a charity helping people with learning disabilities (19.2 million people), is hosting a series of road races around the country. The purpose of these is to encourage people with learning disabilities, and anyone who would like to get involved with them, to take part in road cycling. We have an application process to see if you would be suitable. We want to raise £5000 to get the first £5000 cycle route for the charity completed. Ally's main goals The learning disability community has set out a number of key objectives for people with learning disabilities, and for the way people with learning disabilities and their families, are included and supported in society. PASd - Parents, Carers and Services for People with Special Needs have set out 10 goals which are listed in their strategy "PASd - The Plan". 1 82157476af
